Table of Contents

Section I: Introduction to the History of Curriculum Development and Faculty Role

Chapter 1: Best Laid Plans: A Century of Nursing Curricula
Chapter 2: Responsibilities of Faculty in Curriculum Development and Evaluation

Section II: Learning Theories, Education Taxonomies, and Critical Thinking

Chapter 3: Learning Theories Applied to Nursing Curriculum Development
Chapter 4: Taxonomies and Critical Thinking in Curriculum Design

Section III: Conducting A Needs Assessment for Reviewing and Developing Curricula

Chapter 5: External Frame Factors: Influence and Assessment
Chapter 6: Internal Frame Factors: Influence and Assessment

Section IV: Curriculum Development

Chapter 7: Components of the Curriculum
Chapter 8: Undergraduate Curricula in Nursing
Chapter 9: Graduate Curricula in Nursing

Section V: Curriculum and Program Evaluation

Chapter 10: Master Planning for Program and Curriculum Evaluation: Systematic Assessment and Evaluation
Chapter 11: Application of Educational Evaluation Models to Nursing with A Case Study: Standardized Patient Technology in Formative and Summative Evaluation of Nurse Practitioners
Chapter 12: Planning for Accreditation: Evaluating the Curriculum

Section VI: Curriculum Development and Evaluation in Staff Development and Patient Education

Chapter 13: Adaptation to Staff Development and Patient and Family Education

Section VII: Issues and Trends in Curriculum Development and Evaluation

Chapter 14: Distance Learning
Chapter 15: Summary and Issues