Ethical Foundations of Palliative Care for Alzheimer Disease

Purtilo, Ruth B. PhD

Table of Contents

Foreword
  Christine K. Cassel
Preface
Acknowledgments
List of contributors
Introduction: historical overview of a current global challenge
  Henk A. M. J. ten Have, Ruth B. Purtilo
Pt. I. The health care challenge of Alzheimer disease: basic societal, pathological, and clinical issues
Darkness cometh: personal, social, and economic burdens of Alzheimer disease
  Richard L. O'Brien
Neuropathology and symptomatology in Alzheimer disease: implications for caregiving and competence
  Roger A. Brumback
The clinical challenge of uncertain diagnosis and prognosis in patients with dementia
  David A. Bennahum
Pt. II. European voices on U.S. and European models of palliative care
Expanding the scope of palliative care
  Henk A. M. J. ten Have
Hospital-based palliative care and dementia, or what do we treat patients for and how do we do it?
  Marcel G. M. Olde Rikkert, Anne-Sophie Rigaud
Elderly persons with advanced dementia: an opportunity for a palliative culture in medicine
  Pierre Boitte
Pt. III. Philosophical and theological explorations
Autonomy and the lived body in cases of severe dementia
  Wim J. M. Dekkers
The moral self as patient
  Judith Lee Kissell
The practice of palliative care and the theory of medical ethics: Alzheimer disease as an example
  Rien Janssens
Pt. IV. Clinical ethics issues: focus on patients and caregivers
The tendency of contemporary decision-making strategies to deny the condition of Alzheimer disease
  Jos V. M. Welie
Advance directives and end-of-life decision making in Alzheimer disease: practical challenges
  Winifred J. Ellenchild Pinch
Saying no to patients with Alzheimer disease: rethinking relations among personhood, autonomy, and world
  Franz J. Illhardt
The ethical challenge of treating pain in Alzheimer disease: a dental case
  Gunilla Nordenram
Alzheimer disease and euthanasia
  Bert Gordijn
Pt. V. Organizational ethics issues: educational initiatives, laws, and allocation decisions
The role of nurses and nursing education in the palliative care of patients and their families
  Elizabeth Furlong
Ethical dimensions of Alzheimer disease decision making: the need for early patient and family education
  Linda S. Scheirton
Changing patterns of protection and care for incapacitated adults: perspectives from a European society in transition
  Eugenijus Gefenas
Social marginalization of persons with disability: justice considerations for Alzheimer disease
  Ruth B. Purtilo
Commentary on part V: a clinician's commentary from a post-Soviet society on organizational issues of care for Alzheimer disease
  Givi Javashvili
Pt. VI. Research underpinnings for an ethical model of palliative care
Biomedical research in Alzheimer disease
  Patricia F. Reyes
Conducting research in the Alzheimer disease population: balancing individual, group, family, and societal interests