Table of Contents

Notes on contributors.

Preface.

Part I: Theoretical Perspective on Occupation Analysis.

1 What is occupation analysis? (Gjyn O’Toole).

2 Models to inform occupation analysis (Gjyn O’Toole).

3 The relationship of the International Classification of Functioning, Disability and Health (ICF) to occupation analysis (Lynette Mackenzie and Gjyn O’Toole).

Part II: Analysing Relevant Components of Occupation that Underpin Practice.

4 Occupation analysis and spirituality (Lesley Wilson).

5 Cultural dimensions of occupation analysis (Ruth O. Beltran).

6 Occupation analysis and the home and community environment (Lynette Mackenzie).

7 Analysing the occupation components of self-care (Gjyn O’Toole).

8 Occupation analysis and leisure occupations.

Part III: Application of Occupation Analysis to Specific Practice Contexts.

9 Children: Analysing the occupation of play (Anita C. Bundy).

10 Occupation analysis: cognition and acquired brain impairment (Chris Chapparo and Judy Ranka).

11 Dementia and occupation analysis (Gjyn O’Toole, Samantha Ashby and Michelle Fussell).

12 Occupation analysis and falls prevention (Lynette Mackenzie).

13 Indigenous peoples and occupation analysis (Gjyn O’Toole).

14 Medico-legal assessments (Claudia Walker).

15 Creating occupational engagement to maximise recovery in mental health (Elizabeth Anne McKay and Katie Robinson).

16 Occupation analysis and occupational rehabilitation (Carole James).

17 Public health and health promotion (Clare Hocking).

18 Motor aspects of upper limb functioning and occupation analysis (Judy L. Ranka and Christine Chapparo).

19 Occupation analysis and successful ageing (Ann McIntyre).

Part IV: The Interface Between Aspects of Practice and Occupation Analysis.

20 The importance of professional thinking and reasoning in occupation analysis.

21 Setting and evaluating person-centred goals: an outcome of occupation analysis (Steve Park).

Appendix: Analysing occupations: helpful resources (Gjyn O’Toole and Lynette Mackenzie).

Glossary.

Index.