Activity Analysis: Application to Occupation

Hersch, Gayle I. MD, OTR

Table of Contents

Contents
Acknowledgments
About the Authors
Preface

Module I: Activity: The Foundation of Occupation
Unit 1: The Impact of Occupation on our Human Experience
Unit 2: Activity Analysis: The Learning Process

Module II: The Dimensions of Activity
Unit 3: Activity Awareness and Action Identification
Form 1: Activity Awareness Example: Making a Telephone Call
Form 2: Action Identification Example: Making a Telephone Call
Unit 4: Activity Analysis for Expected Performance
Form 3: Activity Analysis for Expected Performance: Making a Telephone Call

Module III: Therapeutic Utilization of Activity
Unit 5: Activity Gradation and Adaptation
Unit 6: Activity Analysis for Therapeutic Intervention
Form 4: Activity Analysis for Therapeutic Intervention: Making a Telephone Call
Unit 7: The Client-Activity Intervention Plan
Form 5: Client-Activity Intervention Plan: Making a Telephone Call

Module IV: The Versatility of Activity
Unit 8: A Review of the Process
Form 1: Activity Awareness Form: Making Cookies From a Recipe
Form 2: Action Identification Form: Making Cookies From a Recipe
Form 3: Activity Analysis for Expected Performance: Making Cookies From a Recipe
Form 4: Activity Analysis for Therapeutic Intervention: Making Cookies From a Recipe
Form 5: Client-Activity Intervention Plan: Making Cookies From a Recipe
Unit 9: Utilizing Assistive Technology: The Forms Web Site

Epilogue

Suggested Readings Prior to 1996
Suggested Readings From 1996 to 2003

Appendix A: Position Papers of the American Occupational Therapy Association
Appendix B: Uniform Technology for Reporting Occupational Therapy Services, First Edition
Appendix C: Blank Student Worksheets

Index